FOREWORD

A wide range of data has been brought together in this publication, Social Security Beneficiaries by State and County. Divided into two sections, with the focus primarily on county data, the report shows the number of persons receiving benefits and the monthly amounts being paid. It provides social and demographic data needed to enhance understanding of the scope and nature of the social security program. As such, it is a valuable resource for persons involved in public information activities as well as those responsible for the future direction of social security plans and provisions. The materials were prepared by Philip R. Lerner, Office of Research, Statistics, and International Policy, and John Wagner, Division of OASDI Statistics, who was responsible for data processing.

INTRODUCTION

This statistical report provides data in a State and county format about persons receiving social security benefit payments and the amounts being paid each month. Included in the compilation are the social security beneficiary population of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, and United States areas (Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, and the Virgin Islands). This data will be useful to those planning for future needs in such areas as budgeting, social services, health, and transportation. Such population distributions may call attention to the diversity of social differences and may focus on unique economic patterns.

The report is organized into two major parts. Both parts have in common the presentation of statistical data by county, within a State, as of the end of December 1982.

Part 1 shows the number of persons receiving old-age, survivors, and disability insurance (OASDI) benefits among retired and disabled workers and separately for their spouses and children, and for survivors of deceased workers including widows, widowers, parents, and children. To provide a more complete demographic statement on the aged population, the number of persons aged 62 and older is also shown separately and is stratified by sex.

Part 2 provides the same kind of information but concentrates on monthly benefit payments. The same categories of beneficiaries are presented here as in Part 1.

Over the years, these data have been available separately by State. Preference has been expressed for a consolidated national data record in a single document to meet user needs. This publication has been designed to meet that desire.
